WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA: Strong high pressure that has been over northern California will continue in place today with some monsoon moisture and associated cloudiness continuing to stream around it into Northern California. Although it is likely to be noticeably cooler today, it will still be unseasonably hot with somewhat higher Relative Humidity (RH) than yesterday. There will be a slight chance of afternoon and evening wet thunderstorms south of Tahoe. The high pressure will become weaker overnight and this will bring somewhat more unstable conditions to the region beginning a trend that will last until the weekend. Isolated light showers and mostly afternoon and evening isolated wet thunderstorms will become somewhat more likely Wednesday through Friday for all our northern and eastern mountains. Drier Southwest flow will arrive over the weekend as a low pressure trough moves into place off the coast to bring a decreased chance of isolated mountain thunderstorms and cooler temperatures that will be close to seasonal normal. A deeper marine layer will probably return to the coast as well. Isolated thunderstorms may continue over the higher terrain Friday and Saturday, but the general trend will be for decreasing activity as drier and more stable conditions develop.

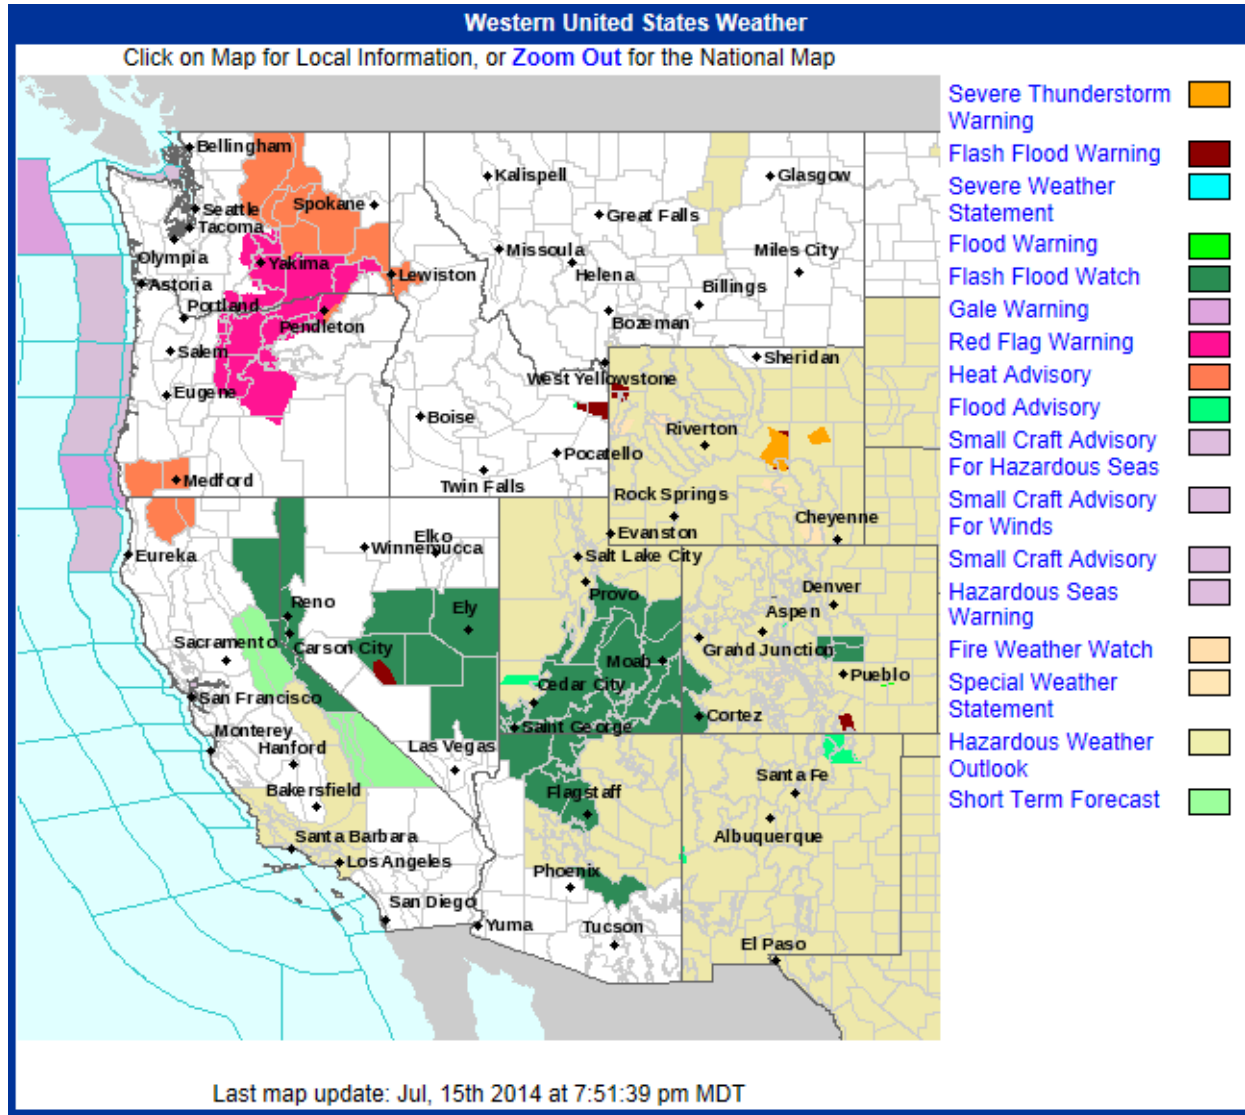

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA: High pressure near the Four Corners region will continue to cycle subtropical moisture into central California, mainly north of Kern County. Further south, drier air has moved into the area, which will result in less cloudiness over most of southern California. Scattered showers and wet thunderstorms will be likely over the Sierras by late morning with storms generally moving to the west at 5-10 mph. Some of these storms may move into the Sierra Foothills and San Joaquin Valley this afternoon, but most of the storms will remain over the higher elevations. Some storms may produce brief heavy rain and small hail. Over southern California, there will be only a handful of showers and one or two thunderstorms near the higher terrain toward evening. High temperatures will continue to be very warm with highs in the upper 70s and 80s in the mountains to the 90s in the valleys. Wednesday and Thursday, expect only isolated showers and thunderstorms near the Crest with mostly sunny weather elsewhere. Temperatures will be cooler Thursday and Friday and highs may only reach the 80s in the valleys. Relative Humidity (RH) will be noticeably lower by the end of the workweek. Looking ahead to the weekend high pressure is expected to rebuild over the region which will lead to warmer temperatures under sunny skies. Isolated thunderstorms may reach the lower deserts near the Arizona border, but otherwise, no thunderstorms are expected Saturday and Sunday. The warming trend will continue into the first half of next week. Winds will be light through the period.

Situational Summary

On January 17, 2014 Governor Edmund G. Brown proclaimed a State of Emergency and directed state officials to take all necessary actions to prepare for drought conditions. The State Operation Center (SOC) is activated to implement objectives in support of the Governor's priorities. The lack of winter rain and snowfall has resulted in extremely dry conditions in many parts of the State. Reservoir levels are down significantly from where they should be on average for this time of year. If conditions continue severe impacts to municipal water supplies, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities are likely in store for the State over the next few months. Negative economic impacts will also result.

The drought could result in severe impacts to the municipal water supplies, wells, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities for several months. The SOC continues to be activated to monitor the situation statewide, and support regional and local operational areas.

On 7/8/14 the State Water Board will publicly release proposed water conservation requirements to reduce water waste across the state. These proposed emergency regulations include mandatory restrictions on water use, and will be considered by the Water Board on 7/15/14.

The Taskforce continues to meet regularly to take actions that conserve water and coordinate state response to the drought.

Cal OES continues to gather drought-related costs from state agencies and local governments.

Situational Summary

Open Burn Ban in effect across the state: Open burning is now prohibited on 31 million acres of land across the state, due to a burn ban that CAL FIRE has directed each of its unit chiefs to implement. This ban on open burning in state responsibility areas (outside of cities and towns) reduces wildfire danger amidst extremely dry conditions.
